To the Committee of the Baptist Missionary Society.

DEAR BRETHREN,

THE Indian dialect to which this little manual may serve for a slight introduction, is spoken by perhaps 700,000 people in Yucatan, which lies between the Gulf of Mexico and the Bay of Honduras. More than half of them know no other language; while the others know more or less of the Spanish—whence indeed the deficiencies of the Maya are commonly supplied.

Your indulgence may be bespoken by the Translator, on the ground that, for want of any other Dictionary within his reach, (if, indeed, there exist another,) he had in the execution of his task, to depend on one compiled by himself from words, phrases and sentences as he could beg them, from the Yucatecan Spanish Indians in this town: although he has since had the advantage of comparing it with a late version of the grammar into Spanish, by an Indian very occasionally submitting to the work of interpretation. After doing what he could, there will doubtless appear many imperfections; of these he must of course assume a large share, and perhaps others may hereafter be found to have otherwise originated.

Respectfully inscribing to that Society whose Agent it was his happiness to be for many years in Jamaica, this little work as the first fruits of a species of Missionary employment new to him, their prayers for his success in translating the Scriptures into the Maya are earnestly requested by their affectionate fellow labourer in the Gospel,

JOHN KINGDON.

DEFINITION AND DIVISION IN GENERAL

OF THE

GRAMMAR

OF THE

YUCATECAN IDIOM.

1. What is Grammar ?

The art of teaching to speak and to write correctly and in perfection.

2. Into how many parts is it divided ?

Into four parts, which are—ANALOGY, SYNTAX, PROSODY, and ORTHOGRAPHY.

3. What is Analogy ?

That which explains the true relation of each word with respect to all others in the sentence : and their various forms.

4. What is Syntax ?

That which points out the way to connect words so as to express our ideas.

5. What is Prosody ?

That which explains the mode of expressing what is written, so as to pronounce it well.

6. What is Orthography ?

That which teaches the authorized number and power of the letters that the syllables and words are formed of; and the written characters of which these words are in a correct manner composed.

7. What are verbs ?

Those which are integral parts of a sentence : as, cáan, heaven ; lúum, earth ; cílich, holy ; ah miaz, the prophet ; xoc, to read ; oib, to write.

8. How are these words designated among Grammarians ?

Parts of speech.

9. What is speech ?

That assemblage of words well connected together, by which we express our sentiments.

10. How many parts of speech are there ?

In the Castilian tongue there are nine, namely : noun, pronoun, article, verb, participle, adverb, preposition, conjunction, and also interjection.

11. What is that which distinguishes these nine parts of speech ?

That the noun, the pronoun, the article, and the participle, are declinable parts of speech ; the verb, conjugable ; and that the adverb, preposition, conjunction, and interjection, are indeclinable.

12. What properties are common to the declinable parts of speech ?

Numbers, genders, declensions, and cases.

13. What are those of the verb ?

Numbers, persons, tenses, moods, and conjugations.

14. What properties belong to the indeclinable parts of speech ?

They do not receive any in their use and expression.

FIRST PART.

Of the Analogy of Words.

ARTICLE I.

OF THE NOUN IN GENERAL.

15. What is a noun ?
That which serves for the naming of things and their qualities.
16. Into what is the noun divided ?
Into the substantive and the adjective.
17. What is a noun-substantive ?
That which is used to name things : as, uinic, man ; kabcheil, arrow ; tunich, stone ; náat, diviner ; ohelil, a sage ; tibilbeil, a philanthropist ; cimzah, a murderer.
18. What is a noun adjective ?
That which serves for naming the qualities of things : as, malóob good, kaz bad, canal high, cabal low, tiblilolil proper, ma tiblilolil improper.
19. Why is the adjective called the second sort of noun ?
Because it is joined to a substantive, to signify or express some one of its qualities.
20. Please to point out some substantives as qualified by their adjectives ?
Here you have them : GRAMATICA mayab, Maya grammar ; UNIC tháah, brave man ; x CHUPLAL zahlum, timid woman ; TUNICH chich, hard stone ; KEBAN zihnal, original sin ; UENEL alil, deep sleep.
21. Into what are substantives divided ?
Into common and proper.
22. What is a common or appellative noun ?
That which belongs to many things : as, UNIC man, which is common to all men ; CONGRESO, assembly, to all assemblies ; ZAHAB fountain, to all fountains.

23. What is a proper noun ?

That which stands for only one thing : as, Dios, God, which answers to only the great King of the universe ; Mejico, to the capital of the Mexican Republic ; and Mississippi, to a certain river in Louisiana so called.

OF THE DIVISION OF THE NOUN-ADJECTIVE.

24. Into what is the noun-adjective divided ?

Into the positive, comparative, and superlative.

25. What is the positive noun ?

The adjective which expresses merely the quality of the substantive : as, malóob, good ; kaz bad ; nohoch, great ; chichan, small.

26. What is the comparative noun ?*

The adjective which, without making a comparison, expresses the quality of the noun in an excessive or defective degree : as, hach tipáan malóob, most abundantly good ; hach tipáan haz, most abundantly bad ; or hach lóob, very wicked : hach tipáan nohoch, or, hach nohochil, most abundantly great, or very great.

27. Please to specify a substantive with each of these three adjectives ?

Here they are : the POSITIVE, Pedro lay haz, Peter is wicked ; the COMPARATIVE, Pedro lay hach haz ema Juan, Peter is more wicked than John ; the SUPERLATIVE, Pedro lay hach tipáan haz, or, hach hazil, Peter is most wicked.

23. What other name is given to these three inflections of adjectives ?

Degrees of comparison.

29. Is there any thing else which is expressive of these comparative parts of speech ?

There is, and it is that the comparative may have three forms : namely, of EQUALITY, as Antonio lay hach canal hebic Juan, Antonio is as tall as John ; of EXCESS, as, Juan lay hach tipáan ah ohel ema Antonio, John is much wiser than Antonio ; of DEFECT, as Antonio lay com zakol ema Juan, Antonio is less industrious than John.

* Presumed to be an error ; for superlative.

DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE SUBSTANTIVE AND THE ADJECTIVE.

- 30 What difference is there between a substantive and an adjective in a phrase or sentence?

This, that the substantive can stand alone without any need of an adjective, on which account it is called a substantive: and that the adjective is not able to stand without a substantive, expressed or understood.

- 31 How will the substantive be expressed?

When we say uinic malóob, a good man.

- 32 When will the substantive be silent?

When we say, leti malóob cu yacuntic le tibilbeil, the good love the philanthropist, understanding after maloob the substantive uinic, man.

- 33 Is there a mode of distinguishing the noun adjective from the substantive?

There is, and it is that which follows: whenever the noun can in good Maya stand before the word báal thing, it is an adjective; but when it cannot precede it, it must be a substantive: as cuxolal modest, is an adjective, because we can say, báal cuxolalháan a modest thing; and uinic man is a substantive, because it is not correct to say báal uinic a man thing.

OF THE NUMBER OF NOUNS.

- 34 What do you understand by the number of nouns?

Their termination, wherein the singular varies from the plural.

- 36 What is the singular number?

That which speaks of only one person or thing; as, ahau king; chunthan, lieutenant; batab CACIQUE (a title peculiar to Americo-Indian Princes.)

- 37 What is the plural number?

That which speaks of two or more persons or things: as, ahauóob, kings; h chúnthanóob, lieutenants; batabóob, caciques.

38 From what do these two numbers arise?

The singular number does not spring from anything ; but the plural number springs from the singular.

39 In what manner?

By adding to the end of the substantive either óob, as xoccl number, xocolóob numbers; or éex, as tibilbeil philanthropist, tibilbeiléex philanthropists; and from uolah decision; uolahéex decisions.

OF THE GENDER OF NOUNS.

40 What do you understand by the gender of nouns?

The distinction by which some of them are known from others as a male from a female.

41 How many are these differences?

Six, to wit: masculine, feminine, neuter, common, epicene, and doubtful.

42 What is the masculine?

That which belongs to men, and male animals; also to other things which resemble this gender, in their nature and signification; as uinic man; tzimin, horse; húum, paper, &c.

43 What is the feminine gender?

That which belongs to women, and female animals; and to other things which are like this gender, in their nature and signification: as, x chup, woman; yegua, mare; carta, letter, &c.

44 What is the neuter gender?

That which expresses indefinite forms, and which does not receive the plural number: as, ló malob, the good, ló kaz, the bad; ló hach kaz, the worst; ló tipan útz, the best.

46 What is a gender common to two?

The name of persons that is suitable to apply to a male and to a female: as Ventura (a proper name) virgen, virgin; martir, martyr; testigo, a witness; homisada manslayer; because one says Don Ventura, Doña Ventura; leti virgén Juan, the virgin John, and le zuhuy Maria the virgin Mary; leti martir, the martyr; and le zuhuy x chup martir, the female martyr; also, leti ah cimzah, the murderer; and leti le chup ah x cimzah, the female murderer.

47. What is the epicene gender ?

That of an irrational animal, expressing in a single word and form what is applicable to both male and female : as cay, fish ; cho, rat ; h chuy, hawk ; which belong to the masculine gender, yet apply to the feminine also ; likewise, zinic, ant ; and can, adder ; feminines, still they stand for masculines.

48. What is the doubtful gender ?

The name of inanimate things, which is used in different forms, both as masculine and feminine : as, leti kanáb, the sea ; le x kanáb, the sea.

DECLENSION AND CASES OF NOUNS.

49. What is declension ?

The inflection of which a noun is susceptible in speech by a variety of offices and uses, and without changing its signification.

50 Please to place the noun Dios God, in two cases with a difference of office, without changing its sense.

Dios cú yacuntic le ah tibilbeil, God loves the merciful man ; and Pedro cu yacuntic Dios, Peter loves God.

51 What power has the noun Dios in these sentences ?

In the former, that it gives force to the verb loves ; and in the second place, that it receives the signification of the verb loves given force to by Peter.

52 How many are the cases which every noun may assume in speech, and what are their different offices ?

Six : and they are called nominative, genitive, dative, accusative, vocative, and ablative.

53 With what ideas is the noun in speech inflected in each of these six cases ?

The nominative is put when it either does that which the active verb signifies, or receives what the passive verb means : the genitive, when it signifies possession ; the dative, where comes the advantage or disadvantage signified by the verb ; the accusative, when the action of the verb falls upon it : the vocative, when we speak particularly to any one ; and the ablative, when it indicates the instrument of doing an act, or expresses in what manner, or upon what account, anything is done.

54. Please to decline a noun substantive in all its cases, numbers, and genders ; an adjective of only one termination, and another of two ; and a substantive, qualified by an adjective with a genitive : which may respectively serve as models for the declension of all nouns.

OF THE SECOND DIVISION OF THE NOUN.

55. In addition to the division of the noun substantive and adjective, the substantive into common and proper, and the adjective into positive, comparative, and superlative, into what other classes is the noun divided ?

Into primitive, derivative, nominal, verbal, national, patronymic, augmentative, diminutive, collective, simple, compound, numeral, ordinal, and partitive.

56. What is a primitive noun ?

That which is not derived from another : as lúum earth ; káax, mountain ; palacio, palace.

57. What is a derivative noun ?

That which is derived from a primitive noun : as, lumil land, from lúum earth ; kaxil hill, from káax, mountain ; palaciego courtier, from palacio palace.

58. What is a nominal noun ?

That which is derived from a noun : as otohcabil, domestic, which comes from otóch, home ; h colnáal, which relates to a corn-piece, from col, a corn-piece ; and h chaha, a water carrier, from ha, water.

59. What is a verbal noun ?

That which is derived from a verb : as, ah ohel a wise man, which comes from ohellabel, to be wise ; ah pintor, a painter, from pintar, to paint ; and, ah con, a fowler, from conah to shoot.

60. What is a national noun ?

That which expresses from what people any one is sprung, or where he resides : as, ah Itzmalil, a native or resident of Itzmal ; ah culil, a native or resident of Cul ; ah Campech, a native or resident of Campeachy.

61. What is a patronymic noun ?

That which formerly expressed filiation : as, Alvarez, which distinguished the son or daughter of Alvaro ; and all surnames are thus called after paternal names.

62. What is an augmentative noun ?

That which increases the signification of the primitive from which it comes : as, from uinic tancelem, a youth : noh uinic, a full grown man ; chiháan uinic, a huge man.

63. What is a diminutive noun?

That which diminishes the signification of the primitive from which it comes: as, x chup com, a little woman; x chuplal, a girl; x lobayan chup, a young woman; x chupal, a girl.

64. What is a collective noun?

That which by its final syllable is singular, and by its signification is plural: as, mazeulóob, the people, by which are signified many men; káaz, a forest, many trees; and malayil uacax a herd of cattle, many beasts.

65. What is a simple noun?

That which is expressed by only one word: as, Jesus, Jesus; Cristo, Christ; Americano, American; Indio, an Indian; Yucateco, a Yucatecan.

66. What is a compound noun?

That which is a compound of two words: as, Jesus-cristo, Jesus Christ; Mejicano, Yucateco, Izamaléño, severally with Iich uoloc, the Mexican people, the Yucatecan people, and the Izamalenian people.

67. What is a numeral noun?

That which serves to express a number: as, huntul, one; hunkal twenty; hokal, hundred.

68. What is an ordinal noun?

That which makes a distinction among several things: as, first, second, third.

69. What is a partitive noun?

That which denotes part of a thing; as, tancoch, half; oxhatzul, a third; canhatzul, a fourth.

 ARTICLE II.

 OF THE PRONOUN.
70. What is a pronoun?

That which stands in the place of a noun: as, ten, I, in place of Pedro, Peter; tech, thou, in place of Antonio, Antonio; and letile, it, in place of pooc, hat.

71. For what sort of nouns does the pronoun stand?

For the noun-substantive.

72. For what purpose ?

To avoid repeating it ; and to speak with emphasis and propriety.

73. Into what is the pronoun divided ?

Into the substantive and the adjective.

74. What is the substantive pronoun ?

That which is seen alone in a sentence, without need of the noun for which it stands : as, ten cin yacuntic Dios, I love God ; tech á pech le lobilóob, thou hatest the wicked ; le ná lay intiil, the house is mine.

75. What is an adjective pronoun ?

That which is united with the noun of which it expresses some sort of appropriate characteristic, or that expresses ownership, &c. ; as, mix humpel uinic cú nacal ti leiti na, no one approaches that house.

76. Besides this division of the pronoun into substantive and adjective, into what other species is the pronoun divided ?

Into personal, demonstrative, admirative, disjunctive, distributive or indefinite.

OF THE PERSONAL PRONOUN.

77. What is the personal pronoun ?

That which is instead of the name of persons or things, and that fulfils their functions.

78. How many are the personal pronouns ?

Three, to wit ; ten, I ; tech, thou ; leti or letile, he.

79. For what person does each of these pronouns stand ?

The pronoun ten, I, stands for the first person ; tech, thou, for the second ; and leti or letile, he, for the third person.

80. Are there more personal pronouns than these three ?

We have the little pronoun cú (which is called reciprocal and reflective,) that stands for the third person leti—that through its not undergoing any variation stands for the third person of both numbers and of the different genders.

81. What various endings occur in the declension of these personal pronouns in their numbers and genders?

Those which follow :—

FIRST PERSON.

SINGULAR MASCULINE AND FEMININE.

 Abl. tioklal x letileoob, by them.

The following while in some respects like that which is properly so called, because it indicates truly the third person, is moreover called a compound pronoun, because it expresses a re-duplication of the pronoun, e. g.

- Gen. ti tiil, of himself, herself, themselves.
 Dat. ti, uaix, utial tiil cú, to, or, for himself, herself, themselves,
 Acc. cú, ti tiil, himself, herself, themselves,
 Abl. tioklal tiil yicnal, by himself, herself, themselves.

OF THE DEMONSTRATIVE PRONOUN.

82. What is a demonstrative pronoun ?

That which standing for the names of persons or things, points them out or make them manifest.

83. How many are these pronouns ?

Three, to wit : leiti, this ; lelo, that ; letile, that.

84. Of what service is each of these three pronouns ?

The pronoun leiti, this, serves to point out what is near to him who speaks ; and letile, that, to point out the thing which is equally distant from him who speaks and from him who hears : i. g. leiti lay in yum, this is my father ; lelo lay á tio, that is thy uncle ; letile lay c ulileex, that is our master.

85. What terminctions spring from the declension of these nouns ?

Those which follow : leiti, this m ; leiti this f ; x leitió or leitióob, these m ; x leitióob, these f ; lelo, that m ; x lelo, that f ; leobo, those m ; x leoba those f ; letile that m ; x letila, that f ; letilo that n ; leloob or lae, those m ; x leoob those f.

OF THE POSSESSIVE PRONOUN.

86. What is a possessive pronoun ?

One which expresses ownership, or, that one has a right to a certain thing.

87. How many are these pronouns ?

Five, to wit :—intilil, my ; a tial, thy ; u tilil his ; c tial our ; a tialeex, your .

88. What is it that distinguishes these five pronouns ?

That the first three lose the final vowel or syllable, when placed before the substantive : v. g., in yum, my father ; in yumloe a yum, my father is your father ; a mehen thy son ; a mehen tech, thy son ; ú nohyum, thy grandfather ; ú nohyumeex his grandfathers.

89. What final syllables are generated by the declension of these pronouns in their two numbers and genders ?

Those which follow : intiil my m ; a tiil thy m ; ú tiil, his m ; c tiil, our m ; a tileex your m ; intüloob, our p ; a tiilticex your p ; 'ü tiilticoob, their m ; a tiilticeex your m ; in x tiil my f. s ; a x täl thy f. s ; ú x tiil her f. s ; c x tiil our f. s ; a x tileex, your f. s ; a x tiiloob, your p. f ; a x tiilticoob ; ü x tiilticoob, their f ; a x tiilticoob, your f.

OF THE RELATIVE PRONOUN.

90. What is a relative pronoun ?

That which makes mention of some person or thing spoken of before, that is called an antecedent.

91. How many are these pronouns ?

Five, namely :—leti, he* ; ca, who, which, that ; mac, who, which, that ; maax, who, which that ; maxtil, whose.

* That this personal pronoun may become a relative one, it requires to be used with one of the others.

92. What forms of expression come from the declension of these pronouns?

The following: leti, he; x leti, she; letioob, they m; x letioob, they f; le, that m; x le, that f; lo, that n; leóob, or leóobo, those m; x leóob, those f; cá, who, which; leti, he; cá, it; x le, she; cá, they; báaxlo, what sort; le, that m; maxóob, who, which; x le, that f; x maxóob, who, which, m; maacleti, what sort, pl. m; maacle, what sort, s. m; x maac, whose f. s; maaclo, whose f; lemacóob, whose m. p; le x macóob, whose pl. f; máaxtiil, whose m; x máaxtiil, whose f; ú tilticoob, for them m; ú x tilticoob, for them f; máax, who, which s; and maxóob, who pl.

INTERROGATIVES, ADMIRATIVES, DISJUNCTIVES, AND DISTRIBUTIVES.

93. When the pronouns BAAX, what, MAAC, what MAAX, who, or which, do not mention any person or thing, what sort of pronouns ought these to be in signification?

Interrogatives, admiratives, disjunctives, and distributives: e. g., INTERROGATIVES, báax á cartic, what are you seeking? máax lay, what is it? bic lay á tucul, what is your opinion? ADMIRATIVES, bic numia, what trouble! maax bin ú tucule, who would think it! DISJUNCTIVES, ca hancech ema hancech, bin yanac a cimil, whether you eat or not, you will have to die; DISTRIBUTIVES, bic ú chaic humpel espada, bic ú chaic humpel con, each takes a sword, each takes a gun.

94. What is an indefinite pronoun?

That which applies to persons and inanimate things, such as these:—uamac somebody m; mixmac, nobody m; huntul, one; uamax, any one whatever f; mixmac, not any; cexmac, whichever; cexmacalmac, whatever sort; mixbaal, nothing; amal, enough; bal, something; tulacal, all; yaab, much, many; æec, little, few; hah, individual; ma, none; hecani, certain; fulano, such a one; sutano, a certain person; with all the variations in number and gender which their final syllables receive.

ARTICLE III.

OF THE ARTICLE.

95. What is an article ?

That which is connected with a common noun substantive, in order to express the extent of its meaning, and to distinguish in various circumstances the difference of genders.

96. How many articles are there ?

Two, to wit :—leti, the, and hun, a, or, an.

97. How are these articles called ?

The first, definite ; and the second, indefinite.

98. Why are they thus called ?

Because the first being joined to a noun substantive, expresses it in such a manner, as not to allow of the repetition of the substantive which it so points out ; as when we say, talez-ten leti mascab, bring me the sword. The difference of the second article is, that it does not express it individually ; as when we say, talez-ten hum-pel mascab, bring me a sword.

99. How are they declined ?

In this manner :—

OF THE GENDER OF NOUNS, AS DISTINGUISHED BY THE ARTICLE.

100. In addition to the article serving to set forth the noun as to the extent of its meaning, for what other purpose does it serve?

For expressing the gender of these nouns.

101. How will it express the masculine gender?

By suiting the noun with its own article, leti, the, and hun, a, in the singular; and loob, the p, and huntuloob, ones, in the plural.

102. How will it express the feminine gender?

Always when the following noun suits, by the article x le, and x huntul, in the singular; and x letiob, and x huntuloob, in the plural.

103. How will it express the neuter gender?

When the masculine adjective in the singular number has before it the article lo.

104. Are there any other things by which these indicating expressions are distinguished?

Yes, Sir : and it is that in order to avoid the cacophony, or bad sound, that arises from the meeting of the two vowels, the masculine article leti, the can be united with feminine nouns, which, in the singular number, are connected by ti : as, leti xik, the wing ; leti chich, the bird ; leti aguila, the eagle ; instead of saying, le xik, le chich, le aguila.*

105. Is any other thing to be said pertaining to the article?

Yes, Sir : and it is [that the derivatives of the article leti, are equivalent with those of the pronoun letilé, which stands for the third person ; and in order to distinguish what these indicating parts of speech observe, the afore mentioned derivatives, when put before nouns will be articles ; as, le uinic, the man ; le chuplal, the woman ; lo utz, the good ; leoob libroob, the books ; leoob kukumoob, the pens. But if they precede or follow pronouns, and verbs, as, leti thanhi, he spoke ; thanlahoob, they spoke ; tu yalhoobten, I have separated ; tu toholchintahoob, they hated ; tu hocahoob, they had pulled up ; they will be pronouns.

ARTICLE IV.

OF THE VERB.

106. What is a verb?

That which is employed to express affirmatively or negatively what we declare of things, and the qualities which belong to them.

107. Into what is the verb divided?

Into the substantive and the adjective.

108. What is the substantive verb?

That which expresses only the affirmation or the property of things ; and the manner of doing it, is, by the verb laytal, to be : as, le bat lay zazac, the taper is bright.

* These examples do not seem in point, and the rule is from the Spanish.

109. What is the adjective verb ?

That which unites to the affirmation or property of things, what also expresses the effect of their qualities or their adjuncts : as, le bat zaclem, that taper is shining, which is the same as to say le bat lay zazac, or, yan lelem zacil, that taper is bright, or its whiteness shines.

110. To what verb is applied the term adjective ?

Every one except the verb laytal, and any other of like meaning.

OF THE DIVISION OF THE ADJECTIVE VERB.

111. Into what is the verb divided ?

Into active, neuter, reciprocal, auxiliary and passive.

112. What is an active verb ?

That whose action passes on to another thing, and in which it terminates : as Juan cú chic le nictcoob, John gathers the flowers.

113. What is a neuter verb ?

That whose signification does not pass on to another thing : as, Juan cú uenel, John is sleeping.

114. Is there any other characteristic for distinguishing the active verb from the neuter ?

There is, and it is that which follows : that which placed before the verb asks by the words ti muax, whom, or, baax balil, what thing, will be the active verb ; and when the question is asked by other words, it will be a neuter verb v. g.

ACTIVE VERBS.

Ten in yacuntic—jti máax.—Dios ; I love—whom ? God.
Ten in yacuntic—jbaax balil ?—le ayikaliloob ; I love—what thing ?—riches.

NEUTER VERBS.

Ten in binel—jti túux ? ti Ho ; I am going—whither ? to Merida.
Ten kanaan—ti baax bal ? ti tzenul ; I am anxious—for what ? for education.

115. What is a reciprocal verb ?

That whose signification falls upon two or more persons who act reciprocally with each other, by means of the pronoun cú : e. g. Pedro iix Juan cu ñibticubaoob uaix cú zutulsiboob, Peter and John correspond with each other.

116. What is a reflective verb ?

That whose signification falls back upon the same person, or persons who act, by means of some personal pronoun : as, ten in yacunticinba, I love myself ; tech ualkezicaba, thou repentest thyself ; Pedro cu zac-hicuba, Peter shows himself ; c tonéex c nahinticbaéex, we gratify ourselves ; téex a capelolticabaéex, you remove yourselves ; l etileoob cu zatolalticubaoob, they madden themselves.

117. What is an auxiliary verb ?

That which is used in the exhibition of the compound tenses : as are, laytal, to be ; ximbal, to do ; binel, to will ; yantal, to have ; and paxic, to be able ; for example, layen yacunaan, I am loved ; yanech canaan, thou art tired ; alcabnaheech, he has run away, & c.

118. What is a passive noun ?

That whose signification the person in the nominative receives—for example, le nictéoob lay chaanoob tioklal Juan, the flowers are gathered by John ; u gramaticail cu canal tioklal le uincoob, grammar is learned by people.

OF THE PROPERTIES OF THE VERB.

119. What are the properties of the verb ?

These : numbers, persons, moods, tenses, voices, and conjugations.

120. How many are the numbers of the verb ?

Two, to wit :—the singular number, as, yacuntic, I love ; and the plural, as, c yacuntic, we love ; or c yacunahoon, we are loved.

121. How many persons are there ?

Three in the singular : as, ten yacuntic, I love, tech yacuntic, thou lovest ; letilé yacuntic, he loves ; and three in the plural, as, c toon yacuntic we love ; teex yacunticéex, ye love ; letileoob yacunticoob, they love.

122. How are these persons distinguished ?

By the pronoun which belong to them : that is, those which are called the first persons agree with the personal pronouns ten, I, and c toon, we, of the first person ; the second persons, are those which agree with the pronouns in the second person tech, thou, or, teex, ye ; and the third persons, are those which agree with the pronouns of the third person letilé, he, letioob, cú, le, and letileoob, they.

OF THE MOODS OF VERBS.

123. What is meant by the moods of these verbs ?

That by these are expressed so many different modes of their significations.

124. How many are these moods or differences ?

Four, to wit : indicative, imperative, subjunctive and infinitive.

125. What is the indicative mood ?

That which merely designates or expresses the affirmation or negation which we make of things : as, ten lay, I am ; tech cach yanech, thou hadst ; letile tu yacuntah, he loved.

126. What is the imperative mood ?

That which serves for giving command : as, talez húum, bring paper ; oib cartaoob, write letters.

127. What is the subjunctive mood ?

That which in order to express its force requires to be joined to some other clause : as, kaanan ca oibnacéch, it is necessary that you write ; ua botaceni meyahnaceni, if they pay me I will serve.

128. What is the infinitive mood ?

That which does not use tenses, numbers, or persons, and like the subjunctive requires another verb to complete its signification : as, cu kanaantal nicilthan, they are compelled to be prolix ; in kat oib, I want to write.

129. What are the tenses of verbs ?

The various times belonging to the exhibition of their meanings.

130. How many are the tenses of the verb ?

Three, to wit : present, past and future.

131. Have these tenses any other division ?

The past is divided into preter imperfect, preter perfect, and preter pluperfect ; and the future, into imperfect future, and perfect future.

132. How many, then, are the tenses of the verb ?

Six, to wit :—present, preter imperfect, preter perfect, preter pluperfect, imperfect future, and perfect future.

133. Into how many classes are these tenses divided ?

Into two, to wit :—simple, and compound.

134. What are the simple tenses ?

Those which are expressed by only one word : as, in xib, I write ; ximbalnachen, I walked ; bin ximbalnacen, I shall walk.

135. What are the compound tenses ?

Those which are expressed by two or more words : as, in yacunma, I have loved ; taan in ualcab, running ; layen cambezahaan, I am taught ; bin yanaci ti in xoc, I shall have to read ; impaimai unchic xoc, I ought to be able to read.

136. Are the tenses expressed in only one form in all the moods of the verb ?

No : in each mood they are expressed differently.

137. Pray tell me, then, how we may know the tenses of the verb in each one of the moods ?

TENSES OF THE INDICATIVE.

The present of the indicative is known by this, that the action is being done now : as, ten in yacuntic, I love ; ten yanen in xoc, or, taan in xoc, I am reading.

The preter imperfect, is known by this, that it ends in cach : as, ten in yacuntic cach, I did love ; in xoc cach, I was reading.

The preter perfect is known by this, that the action is already finished: as ten in yacunma, or in yacuntahma, I loved, or I have loved; ten inzahtahma, or in zahtahe, I feared, or I have feared.

The preter pluperfect is known by its having the word cachi united with any passive participle: as, ten in yacuntahma cachi, I had loved; in hantahma cachi, I had eaten.

The future imperfect is known by this, that the action is yet to come: as, ten bin in yacunté, I shall love; ten bin alcabnacén, I shall run.

The future perfect is known by the word yanaci joined with some passive participle: as ten yanaci in yacunma, I shall have loved; ten yanaci in zahtahma, I shall have feared.

TENSES OF THE IMPERATIVE MOOD.

The present and future of the imperative, by which it commands or forbids the action: as, yacunté, love thou; ma á pakmabhalacthan, do not swear falsely.

TENSES OF THE SUBJUNCTIVE MOOD.

The present of the subjunctive is known by the action being expressed as possible: as ten yacunacen, I may love; ten xocnacén, I may read.

The preter imperfect is known by one of these three terminations, en, ni, iix: as ten yacunacen, yacunaceni, yacunaceniix, I might, could, or, would love.

The preter perfect is known by the word layaci, united with some passive participle: as, ten yanaci yama, I may have loved; ten yanaci binen, I may have gone.

The preter pluperfect is known by some one of these three words, ocani, ocanaci, and ocanhi, connected with some passive participle: as ten ocani yacunah, I might have loved; ten ocanaci zahtahma, I might have feared; ocanhi binel, I might have gone.

The future, by the final syllable bini, or, by the word ɔocani, connected with some passive participle : as, ua ten bini yacunah, or, bin yanaci yacunah, If I shou'd have loved ; ua ten bin yanaci, or, bini ɔocaci uenel, If I should have slept.

TENSES OF THE INFINITIVE MOOD.

The present of the infinitive, is known by one of these final syllables, al, el : as, yacuntáal, to love ; talel, to come ; binel, to go.

The past, by the word unchic joined with some passive participle : as, unchic yacunah, to have loved ; unchic uenel, to have slept.

The future, by the phrase bin unchic ti, connected with some present of the infinitive ; as, bin unchic ti ú yacuntáal, to be about to love ; bin unchic ti ú uenel, to be about to sleep.

The mixed past and future tense is known by the phrase unchic ti bin connected with some past participle : as, unchic ti bin ú yacuntaal, to have been about to love ; unchic ti bin ú xupzic, to have been about to spend.

OF THE GERUND.

138. What is a Gerund ?

It is an expression of the infinitive mood formed with táan, which, as well as the mood from which it springs, requires some other verb to express the sense which it gives : as, táan ú tzolxicin, leti ah tzeec utzhitioob ti le ú ah uyahóob, in preaching, the orator uttered profitable things for his hearers.

139. What is the particular office of the Gerund ?

That it declares the distinguishing tense of some other mode belonging to the verb before which it stands : thus by the gerund “ táan ú tzolxicin, is expressed the mood together with this, that the preacher is explaining something to the hearers.

140. Into what are the gerunds divided ?

Simple and compound.

141. What are the simple ones ?

Those which are expressed by only one word : as, ú yacuntic, loving ; ú xocic, reading.

142. What are the compound ones ?

Those which are expressed by two or more words : as, xocol yacunah, xocol ti yacuntaal, having loved.

143. What are the tenses of the gerund ?

Three, to wit : present, táan yacuntaal, loving ; past, as, xoc ú yacuntáal, having loved ; and future, xoc bin ti yacuntáal, being about to love ; and likewise we have the mixed past and future, which is this, xoc ti unchic yacuntal, having been about to love.

OF THE FORMATION OF THE SIMPLE TENSES OF REGULAR VERBS.

144. From whence arise the simple tenses of regular verbs ?

From the present of the infinitive.

145. How do they arise ?

Removing the final syllables "al," "el," "ic," and adding to the radical letters the terminations which are expressive of the tenses and persons that they require.

146. What are the radical letters of verbs ?

Those which stand before the syllables al, el, ic: e. g., in yacuntaal, to love ; binel, to go ; zah^tic, to fear ; they are yacun, bin, and zah.*

147. How do all the persons of the present of the indicative arise from the verb YACUNAH ?

In this manner : yacunahen, yacunahech, yacunah, yacunahóon, yacunahéex, yacunahóob.

OF THE FORMATION OF COMPOUND TENSES.

148. Whence do all the compound tenses of the verb spring ?

From the compound tenses of the infinitive mood, or from the auxiliary verbs, and some other words : e. g. ten yacunanen, I am loved ; ten in yama cachi, I was loving ; ten yanen in ualcab, I have to run ; ten bin yanæ in ualcab, I shall have to run ; ten yanaci ti unchic in ualcab, I shall have to have had to run.

* Yacun, bin, and zah, are given here, as evidently the radical portions of the foregoing verbs, instead of yacunanen zah, as in the original.

OF THE CONJUGATIONS OF VERBS.

149. What is conjugation ?

The changing of the same verb into all the moods, tenses, numbers and persons, by a varying termination.

150. How many are the conjugations of verbs ?

Three : the first is of verbs ending in al, as yacuntáal, to love ; the second, of those ending in el, as binel, to go ; and the third, of those ending in ic, as zahtic, to fear.

151. Please to conjugate these three verbs so, that they may serve for examples after which to conjugate all regular verbs ; and, previously, yantal to have, and laytal to be.

152. How are verbs conjugated in the passive voice ?

By uniting to the conjugation of the substantive verb laytal to be (without making any change,) the participle of the verb which it is sought to conjugate : e. g.
 the verb yacuntic, to love, which is thus conjugated :

PRESENT—Ten lay in yacuntaal, I am loved,

PRETER IMPERFECT—Lay cach in yacuntaal, I was loved.

PRETER PERFECT—Ten hi in yacuntaal, I have been loved.

PRETER PLUPERFECT—Layhien cachi in yacuntaal, I had been loved.

FUTURE IMPERFECT—Ten bin layac in yacuntaal, I shall be loved,

FUTURE PERFECT—Ten dooc laytali in yacuntaal, I shall have been loved.*

* But another way of expressing the passive voice so far as the third person of each number is concerned, is, by placing the pronoun cu before the active verb : as, cú hatzal, it is divided.

SECOND DIVISION OF THE VERB.

153. Besides dividing the verb into substantive and adjective, and then again into active, neuter, reciprocal or reflective, and passive, into what other classes is the adjective verb divided?

Into regular, irregular, simple, compound, the strictly personal, impersonal, and defective.

154. What is a regular verb?

That which besides expressing the radical letters of the infinitive in all the tenses, numbers and persons, has all its terminations conformable to one of the three conjugations yacuntic, to love, zahtic, to fear, and t binel, to go, which are regular verbs.

155. What is an irregular verb?

That which deviates in any of its tenses, numbers, or persons, from the paradigms to which regular ones conform; thus, patal to form, nuctáal to advise, and uenel, to sleep, neither disconform thereto their final syllables throughout the tenses and persons, (like as in pathen they form, nucticoob they advise, uenlóob, they sleep,) nor change at all their radical letters, as in Spanish.

156. Have all the irregular verbs their variations in the same tenses?

No. Sir: but some have them in one set of tenses, numbers, and persons; others, in different persons, numbers, and tenses; and some have them only in the passive participle. Yet with such diversities, they are very rare which happen to have irregularities in the present of the indicative.

157. Are all the irregular verbs of one form?

No, Sir: for some add to the radical letters of the infinitive, as from utzal to compose, utzcintic,; others change them, as, from chital to lie down, cinch't il; some again lose them, as from binel to go, xicen; and others change the letters of the termination, as from yantal, to have, yanten.

158. Seeing that the irregular verbs are of different sorts, and that, still, they may be usefully set forth as models of conjugating by—rather than give those which express among themselves other irregularities, will you give briefly the verbs HEPEL to compress, CHUCPAHAL to include, and KATIC to ask, (which correspond to the first, second and third conjugations,) in addition to the irregular verbs YANTAL and LAYTAL which have been conjugated ?

You have here those of the tenses, numbers and persons which are irregular ; and the tenses and persons which are not given, are not peculiar to the irregular verbs.

GERUND.—Táan ú katic, asking.

159. Have you any other thing to remark on in the irregular verbs ?

Yes, Sir ; and it is that those are not regarded as irregular which merely for reasons of orthography change their radical letters or terminations, as happens with the verbs, paxal to play on an instrument, chenic to conquer, sutzaal to recompense, and botáal to pay, from which come these, paxnahen I have played, cin nicic, I conquered, cin zuthel or botah I recompensed or paid.

160. What are simple verbs ?

Those which express their signification by themselves ; as, acamtáal to be weary, yantal to have, ú yabtáal to multiply.

161. What are compound verbs ?

Those which are composed of simple verbs, and of some syllable or word which is placed before them ; such are, ti acamtáal to weary out, cumcintáal to contain, ma tu yubic, not to hear, helancuntáal to distinguish.

162. What are personal verbs ?

Those which are used in all the tenses, numbers, and persons ; as, yacuntáal, zahtáal, binel.

163. What are impersonal verbs ?

Those personal ones which are used in their third persons only by finding out the person that acts, and which it is necessary to suppose : as kanaan cu baytal, it needs that it be so ; kanantal, it is necessary ; ú thanoob, or, ú yalcoob, they say ; cú tzicbatal, it is said ; ú yalal cu tzicbatal, to repeat what is said ; thanal cu yalabal, or, cu chachitabal, to utter what is stated, or what is declared.

164. What are simply impersonal verbs ?

Those which are used only in their third person singular, and in the infinitive : as, yahalcab, it dawns, yakabtal, it grows dark, and yeb, it drizzles, which come from zaasztal, to dawn, ekhochental, to grow dark, and yebtal, to drizzle.

165. What are defective verbs ?

Those which in addition to their being strictly impersonal, want some of the tenses, or seldom use them : as cimacil, it pleases, tutal, it lies.

166. Is there any other thing to be explained of the second division of the verb ?

Although it is possible to specify some of these as not given by reason of their being very important paradigms, yet the list which follows exhibits some of the most irregular, defective and impersonal specimens : hepel to compress, yalabal to say, chicbezáal to explain, kokol to go forth, zatzáal to pardon, hupul to measure, cimil to die, botaal to pay, nahaltaal to gain, uenzal to sleep, uyaal to hear, belintaal to travel, ximbataal to walk, ɔibtaal to write, uɔventaal to smell, yúbaal to listen, machal to seize, mentaál to do, cimacil to rejoice, meyah-taal to serve, capal to introduce, mentaál to build, yuchultaal to succeed to, chabal to receive, chuyaltaal to hang, takal to cleave to, ɔabal to give, chabal to gather, ɔalal to overload, tazaal to fetch, tohpultaal to declare, catzubtab to make clear, chachital to bawl out, yacam-taal to violate, kokoláal to bruise, yoczáal to draw away, yoltáal to let in, toholtáal to throw, binel to go, botáal to give satisfaction, talél to come, cucháal to load, actan-meyhultaal to serve first, chital to approach, pit-hóoltáal to lead astray, yiláal to see, tepel to enwrap, baxaltáal to trifle, tzilil to break, zutzal to return, ɔabal to stand for, kaxal to bind, oheltáal to be wise, chinchinthantal to speak abusively.

OF THE PARTICIPLE.

167. What is a participle ?

It is a part of speech which partakes of the noun adjective and the verb, and that has the same properties which they have.

168. Into what are participles divided ?

Into the active and the passive.

169. What is the active participle ?

That which expresses action, and terminates in tic or cic : as, yacuntic loving, xocic reading.

170. What is the passive participle ?

That which expresses the receiving of the action, and terminates in háan or hi : as, yacunaháan loved, ɔocanhi read, ɔibtáabhi, written, t ɔabilboltabhi, desired.

171. Affirming that the participle participates with the noun adjective and the verb, in what respects will it perform the part of a noun ?

When connected with a substantive, by expressing its quality and by uniting with it : as, uinic cuxolal, a modest man, chupalóob x mukalaltahanóob lazy women.

172. In what ways will participles perform the functions of verbs ?

Alone or connected with other verbs, whenever they signify time : yacunah ti le almahthanilóob, loving the commandments ; tech layech yacunaan, thou art loved ; letilé yan tu uenel, he is sleeping ; Pedro alcabnahi, Peter has run.

173. How many are the tenses of participles ?

Three, to wit : present, as yacunah loving ; past, as, yacunaháan loved ; and future, as, cá xocóol ti ú yacun-táal being about to love.

OF THE ADVERB.

174. What is an adverb ?

It is a part of speech which is connected with a verb, in order to qualify it and express its signification : as, lay ocnakin, it is late ; hanen utz, he eats well ; uenen kaz, he sleeps badly.

175. Into what are the adverbs divided ?

Into simple and compound.

176. What are simple adverbs ?

Those which consist of but one word : chucáam fully ; com briefly ; nao nearly.

177. What are compound adverbs ?

Those which are compounded of two or more words : as, ti chucaanil abundantly ; chucáan, completely ; ti ú chucané, furthermore.

178. What other name is given to compound adverbs ?

Adverbial expressions.

179. Into how many classes may adverbs be divided ?

Into adverbs of place, time, manner, quantity, comparison, order, affirmation, negation, and of doubt.

180. What are adverbs of place ?

Those which express where the actions which the verbs signify are done or happen : as, tii there, titela here, tilo thither, tela here, titelo yonder, baytelo on the further side, nao near, nach far, tuux where, ti tuux whence, ichil between, támcah without, canal up, nâach far, cabal down, actan before, t pachil behind, yokol over, yalan under.

181. What are adverbs of time ?

Those which express when the actions which the verbs signify are done or happen : as, hele to-day, holoh yesterday, zamal to-morrow, helela now, zebal soon, xan lately, tanil before, zeb quickly, zeblacil rapidly, x ma helel incessantly, mix bikin never, mixca no when, oci finally, cabin when, calicil meanwhile.

182. What are adverbs of manner ?

Those which express how the actions are done or happen which the verbs signify : as, utz well, kaz badly, bay so, chenil softly, kaam vigorously, xan gently, canal loudly, cabal softly, utzkananil conveniently, kazhanil inconveniently, and likewise words ending in il, as, otzilhanil poorly.

183. What other adverbs are there ?

Those of quantity are these, yab much, œœc little, hach very, nâach enough, yabalil, sufficiently, bahun excessively ; those of comparison are, hach more, com less, tipaan excessively, hach hachkaz very badly, tipan utz most excellently ; those of order are, yaxchunil firstly, tu tzololil consecutively, tu ca hatzulil respectively, tu xulile lastly, maili previously, t pachil subsequently, œb obliquely ; those of affirmation are, la yes, la hah certainly, tu hahil surely, tu ti hahilil verily, ma tu capelcuntaal undoubtedly ; those of negation are, ma no, mixbaal nothing ; those of doubt are, bala perhaps, unchacit possibly, pel scarcely, olac almost.

OF THE PREPOSITION.

184. What is a preposition ?

It is a term which means that it is put before other parts of speech ; whether, alone, to govern a noun, or, with a verb to point out the object which explains its use

e. g. in yacunt Dios yan yetel Pedro manahaan utial yotoch, the beloved of God went with Peter into the Temple.

185. Of how many sorts may prepositions be?

Two, to wit:—proper and improper.

186. What are the proper prepositions?

Those which have their signification alone, and are not compounded with other words: as, ti to, actaan before, hebic as, yetel with, nacuntic against, tacti from ti tactitel up to, ichil between, baya so, tac utial towards, tioklal by, hebix likewise, xma without, yokol over, t pach behind.

187. What are improper ones?

Those which are used only in composition with other words: as emzah under, hok out, nai without; emzah-cuch, to be under a load, hokzah to root out, naiolal, to be careless.

OF THE CONJUNCTION.

188. What is a conjunction?

That which unites and binds together the parts of a sentence, and various sentences with one another: as, Pedro iix Juan t binióob t con, hebic Francisco iix Antonio, ti caibal; Peter and John are gone a shooting, but Francis and Antonio, a fishing.

189. Into how many classes are conjunctions divided?

Into eight, namely: copulative, disjunctive, adversative, conditional, causal, continuative, comparative, and final.

190. What are copulative conjunctions?

Those which severally connect some words with others: as, iix and eix and, mix nor, ca that; Pedro iix Juan ma tu sibtahóob mix tu xocahoob, he Felix eix Ignacio tu mentahóob tu cettil; Peter and John do not write or read, but Felix and Ignatius do both.

191. What are disjunctive conjunctions ?

Those which express a division or difference between things : such are, uaix or, ua or, xoc either ; Juan ix Francisco, Antonio ua Onofre, xoc ú yoklóob uaix xococ u hokloob, John and Francis, Antonio or Onofre, either came or departed.

192. What are adversative conjunctions ?

Those which express opposition or contrariety between things ; such as, hebic but, cabin when, cexi although, utz well, utzca provided that, uama unless, cáan ca be it that : as, in uoltici alcab he ma unchaci, I might wish to run but I cannot ; leti takin cu mentic le uin-cóob ayikalilóob hebac ma utzul yanilóob, money makes men rich, but not happy ; leti juez cexi toh, lay cha otzilil, the judge though severe is just.

193. What are conditional conjunctions ?

Those which signify some circumstance, or denote necessity of some circumstance ; as these do, la if, uama except, hebic but if, and cexilac provided : thus, unchac ú talel ua a kati you can come if you ask ; uama a xoc bin layacech hma ohel, (or, hebic a xoc bin layacech ah ohel) nayolaltaba, cexilac y ca lae a xocvez a kochol, if you wish to be learned, study—if you do not study, you will be ignorant.

194. What are causal conjunctions ?

Those which are used to express the cause of any thing ; as, tiokalca because, tumen since, he ca therefore ; ma pathi in tanlahtic tioklalca minanen cach, I could not help, because I was absent ; mukyaht le tzecul, tumen ta mentah le zipil, bear the correction, for you committed the fault ; xóoc in xelchitic cachi he ca in almahthanma, I proved it well, because I determined on it.

195. What are continuative conjunctions ?

Those which are used to continue a sentence ; as are, túun while, bay so that, ca xaan wherefore, (the xaan being expressed or implied,) leitil thus, bay so, laili thus, tucetil likewise, tilelaili nucul in like manner : e. g., in ualic, tuun, ca hoki ti letile pecoltzic, I say, then, that he came out of that danger ; bay ca hebic culaan alakaan minaan nucul utial macuntabal, therefore, as it appeared, he had no reason to be absent ; utial nuctaan uair nuctahaan, ca cu boybenzicóob etezaba a kama utz, it being, then, expressed or implied, that they who aid receive the reward.

196. What are comparative conjunctions ?

Those which express the comparison of some things with others ; as, la such, bay so, bic as, bay hebic just as : e. g. leti mehenil lay bic á yum, the child is as his father ; bay hebic leti timon cú mektantic le chem, lay leti utzul ah mektan capitan cu tzolic ú soldadóob, just as the rudder governs the boat, so does the good captain rule his soldiers.

197. What are final conjunctions ?

Those which express the end or design of a thing ; as, tioklalca that, utial ca in order that, tú xul ti ca to the end that : as, cu cabalóob le nuculóob utial ca nahaltabac leti xul, the methods are given in order that the object may be gained ; leti yuntzil yayancil tioklalca cambanacóob ú mehenóob, the master toils that the scholars may understand ; iix cú tzolxicintóob lelobóob ti le makolal ti xul ti ca ú nacheuntucabóob ti laé, and they are warned against sloth to the end that they may be rid of it.

OF THE INTERJECTION.

198. What is an interjection ?

It is a part of speech which is used to express the various emotions of the soul.

199. Why is it called interjection ?

Because it can be placed between any of the other parts of speech.

200. What are the significations of interjections ?

They are many ; and some of their properties are common to all.

201. Of how many sorts are interjections ?

They are those of hakol wonder, ti yail of grief, ti cimacolal of joy, ti utz kam of gratitude, ti pecil of abhorrence, ti tzetzeethan of censure, ti macunzah, of denial, ti kuxil of annoyance, ti lepolal of fury, ti zahlumi of fear, ti chéech of stupidity, ti nicil of despair, &c.

202. What are the interjections ?

Those which follow :—á, ay, ea, macachi, nicaba, ha, ah, cho, ca, á, hé, ola, hun, be, or becech, bici, bicié, xen, ua.

203. How will each of these interjections be known ?

By the kind of speaking or writing.

OF THE FIGURES OF SPEECH

204. What are figures of speech ?

Certain arbitrary changes which are allowed in the use of some words, increasing or abbreviating them, &c. by this method varying their form on account of euphony, &c.

205. How many are these figures of speech ?

The most useful and common ones are four, namely :—synalæpha, aphæresis, syncope, and apocope.

206. What is a synalæpha ?

The cutting off the final vowel of a word when the following begins with a vowel : as, tí instead of tí leti, tilé instead of tí leti or rather *leló

207. What is aphæresis ?

The taking away a letter or syllable from the beginning of a word, as, utzora for tiutzora a lucky hour, kazora for tikazora an unlucky hour.

208. What is syncope ?

The removal of a letter or syllable from the middle of a word : as, ilic for yilic, to see, mehul for meyhul to serve.

209. What is apocope or abbreviation ?

The removal of letters or a syllable from the end of a word : as, hun for huntul one, uacil, for uamax cilich some holy person.

OF THE EXPLANATION OF ANALOGY.

210. What do you understand by the analysis of analogy ?

The examination which is made of any sentence, in shewing the connection between the different parts of speech of which it is composed, that of each with its root, and, also, with its various inflections.

* Here again, as in the first two examples given in the 104th answer, inapposite examples in Maya appear to be given for the Spanish usage in the following words :—del for de el, of the, alfor à el, to the, dello for de ello, of it.

211. How is this sentence to be analysed—"Jesu Cristo x má helel tu cambezah ú camzáal haliti ti cuxáan humthan xamá ú sibtic mixbaal?"

In this manner : Jesu-cristo (Jesus Christ,) is a proper noun substantive, compounded of Jesu and Cristo ; of the masculine gender and of the singular number. Xmá helel (incessantly,) is an adverb of time. Tu cambezah (taught,) an active verb, in the third person singular, of the Indicative Mood of the verb cambezáal of the first conjugation. U (his,) a possessive pronoun of the masculine gender, the same as the dissyllable útiil, and losing the final syllable by the figure of speech called apocope or abbreviation. Camzáal (doctrine,) a verbal common noun substantive, derived from camzáal to teach, which is an abbreviation of cambezáal, of the feminine gender and of the singular number. Hunali (only,) adverb of manner, as is the word pelhalili, solely. Ti (by) a simple preposition. Cuxáan (living), a noun adjective which comes from cuxtal, which is connected with humthan (voice,) a common noun substantive, derived from hunthantáal to speak, of the feminine gender, because suitable for the article le the, and of the singular number, because the name of only one thing. X má (without); a compound preposition. U sibtic (writing); the present gerund. Mixbaal, literally, nothing, but by the previous negative, here required to be (anything) ; from baal (thing,) a common noun substantive, of the singular number, and mix (not any) which is joined to baal, and may be connected with equal propriety with a person or thing in either number.
